

Notes on Contributors

Sirojuddin Arif is a researcher at the SMERU Research Institute (www.smeru.or.id). He has conducted numerous research and evaluation studies on issues related to poverty, social protection, development, and gender. His paper, 'Poverty Reduction in the Post-New Order Indonesia' was presented in 2009 at the Graduate School of Public Administration, Seoul National University (GSPA) and UN Research Institute for Social Development (UNRISD) International Conference on Global and National Strategy for Poverty Reduction.

Rina Bhattacharya is a research Fellow at the Institute of Social Studies Trust, New Delhi. She joined the Institute of Social Studies Trust (ISST) in 1987. Before joining ISST she worked at the National Council for Educational Research and Training, and the Jawaharlal Nehru University. Her research interests are poverty, gender and development issues. She has a PhD in Psychology from Delhi University.

Sarah Cook is the Director of the United Nations Research Institute for Social Development. She was formerly a Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies (IDS), where she directed (with Naila Kabeer) the research programme on Social Protection in Asia and has worked in the Ford Foundation's Beijing office. Her research focuses on China's economic and social transformation, and her recent work has included research on social policy, labour markets, informal employment and gender, as well as work on China's emergence as a development actor.

Grace Fernandez is Programme Manager at the Institute of Social Studies Trust (ISST) Bangalore. She has a Masters degree in Rural Development from Indira Gandhi National Open University. Her areas of interest are gender, development, health and social work. She has been at ISST since 1989 and is associated with the Society of St Vincent de Paul, a charity organisation, since 1994 as a member, and as President for the past four years.

Haris Gazdar is a senior researcher at the Collective for Social Science Research. He is the team leader on the Social Protection in Asia project 'Residential Security as Social Protection in Pakistan'. He has contributed widely to social science research and social and economic policy debates in Pakistan and elsewhere.

Xiaojiang Hu is a professor at the School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP). Her main research interests include migration studies and medical sociology. Her recent research projects cover migrant social networks, health policy, risk analysis, poverty reduction, and social protection.

Karishma Huda is a senior research associate at BRAC Development Institute in London. She has worked extensively on the Consultative Group to Assist the Poorest (CGAP)/Ford Foundation global graduation programmes in Bangladesh, Haiti, Pakistan, India, Yemen and Ethiopia. She is currently managing the Secretariat for the global graduation programmes, and is responsible for research, monitoring, and evaluation across nine pilots. Karishma's research interests include extreme poverty, social capital, gender and agency, microfinance plus and social performance, with several academic publications on these topics.

Widjajanti Isdijoso is the Deputy Director of the SMERU Research Institute (www.smeru.or.id). An economist by training, she has extensive experience in research, especially in combined qualitative–quantitative methods on poverty, decentralisation, poverty reduction policy and crisis impacts. Her works have been published in numerous papers, including 'Indonesia's Transition to Decentralized Governance', in J.G. Holtzappel Coen and Martin Ramstedt (eds), Decentralization and Regional Autonomy in Indonesia, Singapore: Institute of Southeast Asian Studies (ISEAS) (2009).

Naila Kabeer is Director of the Social Protection in Asia research programme. She is a social economist specialising in gender, poverty, and social policy issues. Her main areas of research have been in South and South-east Asia. She has also been active in developing frameworks and methodologies for integrating gender concerns into policy and planning and has substantial experience of training and advisory work with governments, bilateral and multilateral agencies and NGOs. Her most recent publications are Mainstreaming Gender and Social Protection for the Informal Economy (Commonwealth Secretariat 2007) and Global Perspectives on Gender Equality: Reversing the Gaze (Routledge 2007).

Liyue Lin is a PhD student at the Institute of Geography/School of Geography, Fujian Normal University in China, currently working on the mobility patterns and social protection of rural–urban migrants in China. She has a BSc in Geography and MSc in Human Geography, from Fujian Normal University. She has published several papers in leading demographic journals in China, as well as in an international journal and at an international conference.

Qibin Lu is a post-doctoral fellow at the School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP). He holds a PhD from the School of Economics and Management, Tsinghua University. His main research areas include public policy, emergency management, social conditions and public opinion, and social enterprise. After the Wenchuan earthquake he participated in a number of research projects in Sichuan province, China, such as social protection, local governance, community social capital and community service.

Darshini Mahadevia is a Professor at the Faculty of Planning and Public Policy, CEPT University (Centre for Environmental Planning and Technology), Ahmedabad. She is member-secretary of the Centre for Urban Equity at CEPT University and has been researching on urban land, housing and finance in India and occasionally, in China. She has published on these subjects as well as on human development.

Hussain Bux Mallah is a research officer at the Collective for Social Science Research. He works on inequality, social marginalisation, poverty, migration, land rights and urban issues in Pakistan, and has particular expertise and experience in carrying out qualitative research on these and related issues across diverse communities in the country.

Xiaomei Pei is currently a professor at the Department of Sociology, Tsinghua University. She received a doctoral degree at the University of North Texas in 1996 and post-doctoral fellow training at the Duke University Medical School between 1996 and 1998, in the USA. She has been teaching and researching in the areas of social gerontology, medical sociology and social policy since 1999. Her recent publications have been concentrated on the issues of gender inequality and the social organisation of old age support in China. She also serves as the Executive Director of the Gerontology Center at Tsinghua University.

D. Narasimha Reddy is currently Visiting Professor at the Institute for Human Development, New Delhi. He was Professor of Economics and Dean, School of Social Sciences, University of Hyderabad, now retired. His specialisation includes policy studies and political economy of development and labour economics. Most recently, he was a member of the Farmers' Welfare Commission set up by the Andhra Pradesh Government to look into the issue of the agriculture crisis and farmers' suicides.

Meuthia Rosfadhila is a researcher at the SMERU Research Institute (www.smeru.or.id). She has conducted various research and public policy studies on socioeconomic issues, especially poverty and social protection in Indonesia. Her recent research paper, 'A Rapid Appraisal of the Implementation of the 2008 Direct Cash Transfer Program and Beneficiary Assessment of the 2005 Direct Cash Transfer Program in Indonesia', was presented at a national workshop in Jakarta in 2009.

Scott Rozelle is the Helen Farnsworth Senior Fellow in the Food Security and the Environment Program of Stanford University's Freeman Spogli Institute for International Studies. Rozelle's research focuses almost exclusively on China and is concerned with three general themes: (a) agricultural policy, including the supply, demand and trade in agricultural commodities, (b) the rural environment, and (c) issues of poverty alleviation with a focus on rural education. He is the chair of the Board of Academic Advisors of the Center for Chinese Agricultural Policy.

Miguel A. Salazar is Associate Professor at the School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP). His work concentrates on the migration of professionals around the world, in particular the issues of transnational networks and identity changes. His interests include sociology of identity, sociology of culture, migration, knowledge transfers, network analysis, social psychology, cognitive science and linguistics.

Alakh N. Sharma is currently Professor and Director of the Institute for Human Development, New Delhi. He has made significant contributions to research in areas such as poverty, migration, employment and labour markets. He has authored/edited/co-edited 12 books and published over three dozen research papers in various journals on these issues. He is also editor of the Indian Journal of Labour Economics (quarterly Journal of the Indian Society of Labour Economics) and co-editor of the Indian Journal of Human Development (a bi-annual journal of the Institute for Human Development).

Ratna M. Sudarshan is currently Director, Institute of Social Studies Trust, New Delhi, a non-profit organisation engaged in policy relevant research and action programmes with special focus on women's work and wellbeing concerns. ISST has Special Consultative Status with the United Nations. Prior to joining ISST, she was Principal Economist at the National Council of Applied Economic Research, New Delhi. She has jointly edited four books and published several papers, mainly on aspects of women's work, social protection, and education. She has an MA in Economics from the Delhi School of Economics, and an MSc in Economics from the University of Cambridge.

Muhammad Syukri is a researcher at the SMERU Research Institute (www.smeru.or.id). He has a Masters degree in Sociology from Gadjah Mada University, Indonesia. His research interests include social protection, poverty-environmental nexus, cultural capital, gender mainstreaming issues and social research methods. His latest paper, 'Bisnis Priyayi: A Case Study of Keraton Cigarette Industry', appeared in the Jurnal Antar Budaya, No. 1, 2010, PSAP UGM.

Youcai Tang is currently a PhD candidate at the Department of Sociology at Tsinghua University. His research has been concentrated on social organisation and social development. He has been examining the changes in the relationship between the state and rural society in modern China for his doctoral dissertation. He has published on social protection and migration.

Rukmini Tankha is currently working as a research associate at the Institute for Human Development, New Delhi. She has a Masters degree in Development Studies from the Tata Institute of Social Sciences, Mumbai, India. Her research interests include globalisation and labour, the informal economy, gender and social protection.

C. Upendranadh is currently Senior Fellow at the Institute for Human Development, New Delhi and is the Regional Coordinator for the Social Protection in Asia programme, managed jointly by IHD, New Delhi and IDS. He has over 15 years of experience in the development sector in various fields with specific focus on policy research and advocacy, technical support and management functions in thematic areas of social protection and livelihoods, microfinance and education.

Hongmei Yi is a post-doctoral research Fellow at the Institute of Geographical Sciences and Natural Resources Research, Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS). She has a PhD in Agricultural Economics from CAS (2009). Her research interests mainly focus on human capital investment, social protection network and health policy reform in rural China.

Linxiu Zhang is a professor and Deputy Director at the Center for Chinese Agricultural Policy (CCAP), Institute of Geographical Sciences and Natural Resources Research, Chinese Academy of Sciences (CAS). She obtained a PhD from Reading University. Her research focus is on rural poverty, rural labour market development, community governance, public investments and the economics of rural education and healthcare.

Qiang Zhang is an associate professor at the School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP). His research interests involve government reform, policy process, crisis management and social innovation. His recent work has been on evaluating the impact of the Wenchuan earthquake.

Xiulan Zhang is a professor at the School of Social Development and Public Policy (SSDPP). Her main research fields are social policy, social welfare and healthcare. Her recent research projects focus on the impact of the financial crisis on migrant workers, poverty reduction, major illness insurance for children and costs of smoking.

Yu Zhu is Professor, Institute of Geography/School of Geography, and Director, Center for Population and Development

Research, Fujian Normal University in China. He is also Chair of Asia and Pacific Migration Research Network, Member of the International Advisory Board of UN Habitat's State of World Cities Report 2010/2011, Council Member of the China Population Association, Member of the CPA's Committee on Migration and Urbanization, and Deputy Director of the Committee on Population Geography, the Geographical Society of China. He has a PhD from the Demography Program from the Australian National University, and his research interests straddle the two disciplines of demography and human geography, focusing on issues relating to migration and urbanisation.