MICHAELMAS TERM 1968

THE RESEARCH REVIEW

With this issue we enter into our fifth year of publication. It is gratifying to report that orders for back issues of the Research Review as well as new subscriptions keep coming in from scholars and institutions of higher learning in many parts of the world and our circulation has continued to rise steadily.

In addition to the subscriptions, we have library exchange arrangements with some institutions whereby copies of the Research Review are sent in exchange for publications received. We list these institutions for the benefit of our contributors and readers.

We also record our pleasure at the incipient attraction of the Research Review to fellow scholars in other West African Countries who have begun to send us articles for publication. One such article, which we publish in this issue, is Songs as Historical Data, by Dr. E.J. Alagoa of the Institute of African Studies, Ibadan. We look forward to receiving more contributions in the near future.

May I take this opportunity to express our sincere thanks to all our readers who have sent us their comments and criticisms, which have been of inestimable value to us.

Kofi Asare Opoku.
