I. ACTIVITIES OF THE CENTRE.

The Centre for Applied Social Sciences is a multi-disciplinary research and teaching department within the Faculty of Social Science in the University of Natal.

1.1 A Research Centre.

The Centre for Applied Social Sciences, formerly the Institute for Social Research has been operating successfully since 1954. The Centre functions as a department in the Faculty under the Directorship of Professor Lawrence Schlemmer. The Development Studies Unit within it is under the direction of Professor Jill Nattrass. The Centre's main activity is in the field of applied and basic social research. Studies are undertaken by individual members of staff and by research teams under the supervision of the Director and other senior members of staff. Since its establishment the Centre has been approached by a wide range of organisations which have wished to sponsor projects related to various issues in South African life such as industrial and intergroup relations, work attitudes, housing environments, community needs, black advancement, quality of life, political attitudes and opinions and development studies of various kinds. The results of studies undertaken in the Centre are disseminated to sponsors and the interested public through the Centre's publication service. (A list of current projects appears under III and IV below.)

1.2 A Publication Service for the General Public.

The Centre is widely known for its publishing activity. More than 200 titles covering numerous topical issues in South African society have been made available to the public for purchase. Publications series include research reports, communications, fact papers, monographs and occasional papers, conference proceedings, and journal articles.

1.3 Teaching in Applied Social Sciences.

The Centre provides training in what may be described as social development at the postgraduate level. A two year part-time or one year full-time Postgraduate Diploma in Applied Social Science is offered to persons who hold a suitable degree in social sciences. The course introduces students to theoretical and practical issues in social and economic development in society generally and in organisational and community settings, offers advanced research training, and training in the evaluation of social and development programmes. Students also participate in practical research tasks in the field of development and change. The course is designed to prepare students for developmentally-oriented work and research in voluntary organisation, in industry, in the civil service and in community programmes of various kinds. As from 1983 an Honours Programme covering the same fields in greater depth will also be offered.

1.4 The Development Studies Unit in the Centre for Applied Social Sciences.

Since 1982 a Development Studies Unit, headed by Professor Jill Nattrass, has been operative as a sub-department in the Centre. The Unit aims at providing a focus for the concentration of development efforts on the Third World environment in South and Southern Africa. In future the Unit will undertake research into the development needs of communities and regions in Southern Africa, motivation and organisation for urban and rural development and will evaluate practical alternative strategies for development. After 1983 the Unit will also become a teaching unit and offer course work towards the Masters Degree, specialising in Development Studies. The Development Studies Unit also contributes to the research and teaching programmes in the Centre generally and vice-versa.

1.5 The Communication Role of the Centre.

The Centre for Applied Social Sciences is well-known for its interest and participation in community and national areas of concern. Members of the Centre staff serve as consultants to and expert advisors on a wide range of industrial, civic, political, planning and research bodies. University departments and practitioners frequently rely upon the Centre's expertise in solving practical and theoretical research problems. The Centre also provides a forum for the discussion of current issues by convening workshops and seminars for members of the academic community and practitioners in the field.

1.6 A New Monitoring Service to be provided by the Centre in 1982.

A Change Data Resource Unit has been established within the Centre which aims to collect and analyse indicators of social change and development in South African society. The monitoring tasks of the Unit include newspapers and media analyses, the collection of statistics on development in a wide range of organisational settings, regular systematic surveys of opinion, ad-hoc surveys of crisis situations, and the presentation of scenarios of emergent socio-political conditions in South Africa. As a service to the community the results of the Unit's monitoring studies will be distributed to a subscriber-panel at regular intervals. Once the Change Data Unit is fully operational (in 1983), reports on change in various areas of South African life will be available quarterly, under the title of Social Indicator South Africa.

2.2 Finance:

The Centre, as with any department, has free accommodation at the University, and in addition, telephone and postage costs are borne by the University. The University contributes the salaries and the usual additional benefits connected with all permanent posts. In addition a small departmental grant and a library grant are received from the University.

Funds for undertaking research, for the purchase of research equipment and the employment of ad-hoc research staff have to be obtained by the Centre itself, mainly in the form of grants for particular projects. At the end of 1981 the Centre had somewhat over R80 000 for purposes of conducting research, most of which was tied to particular projects. Projects are, however, costed in such a way as to provide for a modest accumulation of money to purchase equipment and maintain continuity. The Centre's funds are administered by the University Accounts Section.
