

Notes on Contributors

Sara Abbas received a Master's degree in Development Studies from Cambridge University in 2002. Since then, she has worked for several years on issues of governance, human rights and women's political participation in Sudan.

Hussaina J. Abdullah is a sociologist and an independent scholar with extensive research and consultancy experience in West Africa. She has provided consultancy services for the Swedish NGO Foundation on Human Rights, International Labour Organisation (ILO), United Nations Population Fund (UNFPA), United Nations Children's Fund (UNICEF), the Ford Foundation and the African Union, on women's human rights, democracy, labour and employment relations, and post-conflict reconstruction processes.

Clara Araújo has an MA and PhD in Sociology and Anthropology from the Federal University of Rio de Janeiro, and a post-doctorate in Sociology from the University of Cambridge and the Instituto Universitário De Pesquisas do Rio de Janeiro [University Institute of Research, Rio de Janeiro]. She is the Academic Coordinator for the Postgraduate Programme on Social Science, State University of Rio de Janeiro and coordinates the Center for Research on Contemporary Inequalities and Gender Relations. Her current research focus is on political sociology, especially issues of citizenship, identity and collective power; gender relations; political representation; public and private spheres; and gender equality.

Julie Ballington is the Gender Advisor, Global Programme for Electoral Cycle Support (GPECS) in the Division for Democratic Governance at United Nations Development Program (UNDP). She formerly served as a specialist in the Gender Partnership Programme at the Inter-Parliamentary Union based in Geneva, where she worked on enhancing women's participation in parliaments, electoral processes and within political parties. She previously worked at the Electoral Institute of Southern Africa (EISA) based in Johannesburg, managing the work on gender-related aspects of electoral participation and administration in southern Africa. Julie holds a Master's degree in Political Science from the University of Witwatersrand in Johannesburg, South Africa.

Sarah Childs is Professor of Politics and Gender at the University of Bristol. She has written widely on women's political representation in the UK: women's political recruitment, the substantive representation of women and the concept of critical mass. Her books include New Labour's Women MPs (2004) and Women and British Party Politics (2008). She is currently writing a book on Gender and the Conservative Party (2011, with Paul Webb).

Ana Alice Alcântara Costa is a political scientist working at the Federal University of Bahia. She has a post-doctorate from the Institute of Women's Studies at the Autonomous University of Madrid. Her main interest is the study of women's participation in political spaces and she has been working on gender, citizenship, political behaviour, public policy and feminism. Ana Alice is also Coordinator of the Postgraduate Programme for the Nucleus of Interdisciplinary Studies at the Federal University of Bahia.

Islah Jad is the Director and one of the founders of the Women's Studies Institute at Bir Zeit University, Palestine. She is also Assistant Professor of Gender and Development at Bir Zeit. She is one of the founders of WATC (Women's Affairs Technical Committee), a national coalition for women in Palestine. She has published many works on Palestinian and Arab women's political participation. She is the co-author of the Arab Human Development Report 2005 (UNDP, New York).

Juliana Kantengwa is a member of the Chamber of Deputies and Vice-President of the Parliamentary Committees on Agriculture, Livestock and the Environment, and Commerce and Trade within the Rwandan Parliament. She became a Member of Parliament in 1999 and was elected to the National Chamber of Deputies in September 2003 in Rwanda's first ever democratically contested national elections. She is a member of the Rwandan Patriotic Front Party. From 1999 to 2008, she was a member of the Rwandan Women Parliamentary Forum, first as Secretary-General and from 2003, as Vice-Chairperson. She has an MSc in Veterinary Microbiology and Pathology.

Saba Gul Khattak is currently working as Member, Social Sector, Planning Commission of Pakistan. She holds a PhD in Political Science and writes on gender issues, public policies, governance, militarisation, and human security. She is a member of several organisations, including the Women's Action Forum (WAF); governing bodies of the University of Peshawar, PIDE University, and Pakistan Institute of Labour, Education and Research; and the editorial boards of Signs and Theoretical Perspectives. Recent publications include Hazardous Home-based Work: A Story of Multi Tiered Exploitation (with Shahruxh Rafi Khan and Sajid Kazmi, OUP, 2005) and Inconvenient Facts: Military Regimes and Women's Political Representation in Pakistan (SDPI, 2005).

Sohela Nazneen has a PhD in Development Studies and an MA in Gender and Development from the Institute of Development Studies (IDS), Sussex. She is an Associate Professor at the University of Dhaka, Bangladesh and a Research Fellow for the South Asia Hub of Pathways RPC, based at the BRAC Development Institute. Her research has focused on institutional analysis of gender, including extensive work on gender and accountability structures, and gender analysis of NGO management practices. Her ongoing work includes feminist movement building in transitional contexts and women's participation in Islamic movements.

Montserrat Sagot is Professor of Sociology and Women's Studies at the University of Costa Rica. She was the Associate Dean of Graduate Studies from 2000 to 2004. She is currently the Chair of the Regional Masters Programme in Women's Studies. Her publications include The Critical Path of Women Affected by Family Violence in Latin America: Case Studies from 10 Countries, (Pan American Health Organization, 2000) (Re)Definiendo las Identidades y la Acción Política: Multitudes Diversas, Sujetos Colectivos y Movimientos Sociales en la Centroamérica del Nuevo Milenio (Universidad de Costa Rica, 2009) and co-author of Femicide in Costa Rica, 1990–1999 (Duke University Press, 2010).

Divya Sharma is a Research Associate with the Institute of Social Studies Trust, New Delhi. Her areas of interest include agrarian and rural livelihoods, gender, participatory development and community media. She has an MPhil in Development Studies from the University of Cambridge (2008) and an MA in Sociology from the University of Delhi (2007).

Ratna M. Sudarshan is Director, Institute of Social Studies Trust, New Delhi, a non-profit making organisation engaged in policy relevant research and action programmes, with special focus on women's work and wellbeing concerns. Her research areas of interest include: women in the informal economy; social protection; governance and women's leadership; research and policy linkage; gender and evaluation. She has an MA in Economics from the Delhi School of Economics, and an MSc in Economics from the University of Cambridge. She has jointly edited four books and published several papers, mainly on aspects of women's work, social protection, and education.

Mariz Tadros is a Research Fellow at the Institute of Development Studies (IDS), and a researcher in the Pathways of Women's Empowerment Research Programme Consortium, working closely in collaboration with the Middle Eastern regional hub. Prior to joining IDS, she was an assistant professor of political science at the American University in Cairo and worked for many years as a journalist for Al-Ahram Weekly newspaper. Recent publications include: the Egypt country report for Freedom House, Women's Rights in the Middle East and North Africa (Freedom House, 2010) and 'The Non-Muslim Other in Muslim Family Legislation', in Hawwa, 7.2 (Winter edition, 2009).

Sakiba Tasneem is a Research Associate at the BRAC Development Institute (BDI). She is working with the project 'Pathways of Women's Empowerment'. Sakiba joined BDI in February 2009. Before that she had been serving with BRAC Research and Evaluation Division (RED) for three years. Sakiba obtained a Master's degree in Economics from the University of Dhaka. Her research interests include women's empowerment, child labour, extreme poverty, gender and health, and health services.